And This Time...It's Personal

by Janice Savage

Assistant News Editor

Democracy is undeniably the world's most revered and treasured ideology. It is a benchmark of a civilized society and while it does have some logical limitations, it is part of what has made Canada the greatest country in the world.

So, I pose this question to the students of Laurentian University. Would you object to having these principles removed? Would you feel cheated if you discovered that only the interests of an elite few were being represented in your student government? Would you relinquish your right to referendum to a tyrannical executive that you had elected in good faith? Perhaps this situation is closer to home than you realize.

What goes on behind the closed doors of the SGA Board? Whatever it is, it does not appear to be quite as democratic as they would like us to believe.

BY-LAW 8, section 1 of the BY-LAWS of the SGA states "All SGA Board members shall act with diligence, honesty and good faith in the interest of the SGA". There is no mention of acting in the interest of Joe Student (or Ginette Student) until an OH-BY-THE-WAY-LAW at the tail end of BY-LAW 8 that says that Board members "shall report the views of his/her constituents to the SGA Board regularly." Would someone care to define "regularly"? Would somebody like to explain why the Board members do not have to necessarily act with diligence, honesty and good faith in the interest of the constituents?

This oversight (as it may, or may not be) became obvious at the SGA Board meeting held on February 9.

At this meeting, representatives from Lambda made their case to have a referendum question put on the ballot regarding a five dollar increase in the levy collected from the SGA membership. The motion failed.

What does this mean to you? It means that you have been denied the right to choose for yourself on a matter directly affecting you. You have been denied the right to referendum in regards to a service that is operated independently from the SGA. Could it be that the SGA is having problems distinguishing between personal bias and professional mandate?

Okay, so this time maybe it is personal. The SGA has much to be upset about in regards to the Student Press. We have abided by our mandate to report to the students what has been going on in the ivory offices in the Student Centre. (can you say MANDATE Mr. Clark? I knew you could!) We have revised our constitution and created a policy manual in hopes of creating a more binding set of regulations for the staff. We have followed, and had a hand in revising, the Canadian University Press Statement of Principles. We have remained an open forum for the students of L.U. We have encouraged discussion among the Laurentian Community on topics important to them. Gee...if I were the SGA I guess I'd be pretty miffed myself!

Here's the editorial suggestion of the week to Mr. Clark. Put some reins on your Board, repossess the student conscience that you surely had during last year's elections and get some real principles.

Please see pages 7 to 9 for the SGA hopefuls, coming soon to a closed ballot near you. Better luck next year guys.

Open Letter To The Athletic Department:

by Kim Malone

staff writer

This past academic year, I decided to turn back to a sport which I have not participated in for a long time: Track and Field. I remember walking into the very first meeting at the Phys. Ed building and feeling deathly sick from nervousness. As I sat down, Coach Rick Carleton smiled and said "you must be Kim", right then I knew everything was going to be alright. Rick tries his best to pay attention to all 35 members of the Track and Field team. Everyone who participates in Track is given a full report to the best of Rick's ability and knowledge. He encourages his athletes to do the best they can. However, at times it is extremely difficult for him to fulfill his obligation as a coach due to a lack of support, time, experience, energy and money.

Today this is the least of Rick Carleton's worries and many other coaches and athletes, who's teams may not exist in the near future. If you have not heard the vicious rumour about the Athletic Committee Report please allow me to fill you in. The Committee has proposed to cut certain teams to save money since they are supposedly lacking with Laurentian's image of excellence, lacking in participation, available quality student athletes, levels of ability to compete etc. In short, they want to scrap the Track and field team, the men's ice hockey team, women's field hockey and probably more if Peter Ennis (women's basketball coach and the chair of the Inter-university Athletics) and Peter Campbell (Men's basketball coach and the Coordinator of Men's sports) can get their grimy hands on it. Isn't it ironic the two basketball coaches are at the top of this Athletic committee?! Isn't it ironic how these teams have the least individuals involved yet each member of the team receives (please, prepare yourself) $2591 per player for the women's basketball team and $2254 per player for the men's basketball team?!!!!

I cannot speak for other teams since I am unaware of their position with this proposal, however I can speak for Track and Field. The Track and Field team receives $154 per athlete (2% of the total budget), the 35 individuals do not participate for the entire season! Only 24 athletes were allowed to participate in the first meet and it goes all down hill from here. By the end of the season only the athletes who qualify for the CIAU's are allowed to compete. The Track and Field team has a van which fits 15 people, since the van is small many of the athletes have to find their own way down to the meets. My point is the Track and Field team can survive on the budget it has, even though other increases are made like transportation costs.

The Track and Field team has increased its participation in the three years I have been here, I can safely say it will increase as the years pass. The Track and Field team is not a selfish organization who can afford to take trips, but rather an organization who has helped raise money for important causes. An example, the Track and Field team raised money for the Telemedia Children's Fund. Currently, the team has ranked in the top 10 for 5 individuals, plus 3 relay teams! The team is able to survive without having many facilities available and, in most cases it can accommodate for the weather conditions. The team does not have expensive clothing to wear, it is all provided by the athletes (Unlike the basketball teams that have 3 or 4 outfits to wear for one game). The team enables all females and males to participate in a number of activities and, you do not have to compete to be a member of the team, all are welcome. The Track and Field team has enough room for 25 females and 25 males!

A reply from this athletic committee would greatly be appreciated. Perhaps you can enlighten us on your view of the cutbacks? On how this committee was chosen? Proof of the unbiased proposals? And how the criteria was chosen and why this criteria was chosen? Why do other teams with less people receive more money than others? The coaches, athletes, and students deserve to have these answers and more! We want to know how OUR money is being spent! Remember you are representing all the athletes at Laurentian, not just one team or sport. Other athletes want to see our needs met, not diminished.

Resign And/Or At Least Apologize

I am responding to your personal editorial in the last issue of Lambda. In so doing, unlike yourself, I shall refrain from using near-slandorous accusations, unsubstantiated comments and unauthorized quotes.

I felt your approach to the situation concerning the possible restructuring of the athletic program was very unprofessional, on the verge of unlawful, and most of all, uncalled for. The reason that you do not represent, did not request to represent, and in fact are not even a member of the Track & Field team, yet you gave an absolute impression that you were writing on our team's behalf.

There is no doubt in my mind that you were able to disillusion many readers. However, because I know you personally, I was not disillusioned. From my viewpoint, I do not believe you were writing on anyone else's behalf other than your own. I cannot believe your intentions were meant to help foster support for our team, especially knowing that your article took the space allotted for the results of our team's accomplishments at the U of T invitational. In this, the men's 4 x 800m relay team broke the school record, and Maureen Stapleton's efforts won her "Athlete of the Week" honors. This information, had it been published, would have been far more beneficial to our team.

Mr. Editor, as coach and a member of the Athletic Committee, I am the person who is representing Laurentian University's Track and Field team. Our team is also represented indirectly through two very capable student-athlete representatives. If you felt we were not appropriately representing your concerns, why did you not contact one of us personally?

Furthermore, I am deeply offended by your suggestion that I made little effort to prevent this crisis from further developing once I became aware of the problem. You do not know the hours I spent each day trying to make our program the biggest and best it has been in years. And you are not aware that I am presently doing everything within my capacity to save our program. I have sought outside from within the school, the community and the province. I am constantly expressing my concerns, (and sometimes fears), to the Athletic Director and the Head Chair of the Committee.

I would hope you became aware of my efforts through the response demonstrated on our team's behalf at the open forum. I also hope that evening enlightened you on the situation and I would like to think the information presented made you feel a little uncomfortable in regards to your article which was already published.

I suggest, if you have not already, do one or both of the following. One, resign from your position as Editor-in-Chief, and/or two, make a public apology to everyone you dispassionately attacked or took advantage of in your article, particularly Mr. Ennis and Mr. Campbell.

Rick Carleton
Head Coach Track & Field
Laurentian University

I would like to thank you for finally broadening the discussion on the topic of this apparent restructuring. I would like to encourage anyone else to participate in this forum.

Wife Abuse—Who Suffers the Most?

by Michael Eshkibok
Freelance Ojibway writer

Wife abuse is defined as the physical or psychological abuse directed by a man against his female partner in an attempt to control her behaviour or intimidate her. Violence in the home is seen as a way to deal with anger and frustration. Husband abuse can be used with the same definition.

It is estimated ten percent of women in Canada live in an abusive relationship. Studies on sexual and psychological abuse say it is much higher than ten percent. It is one of Canada's best kept secrets.

There are husband abusers too, but not in comparison to wife abusers. I have met very few men who are willing to admit their wives physically beat them up. It is too embarrassing in a chauvinistic world. It would be better to lie to your friends or fellow employees.

Wife abuse has long term negative consequences for children in most cases. Abused children tend to grow up to be abusers themselves. It isn't hard to figure out why. Children have a tendency to learn what they live.

Wife abuse occurs in all kinds of families and in all ethnic groups. Socio-economic, cultural and educational backgrounds are not factors which can predict wife abuse. This is no way of knowing who wife abusers are or who husband abusers are either.

There is a co-relation between alcoholism and wife abuse, however, alcohol does not cause the abuse. Treating alcoholism does not always end the violence. Alcoholism is a symptom of underlying problems, not just in native communities but non-native communities as well.

In the traditional North American Indian life, wife abuse and violence was usually handled by the Grandparents and Elders. Prior to contact, in most Native societies, our women were treated on an equal basis.

Who are the red victims in cases of domestic violence?

The vast majority of Indian nations believed in the unity of all aspects of life. The responsibilities of family were highly valued, especially educating children in a holistic manner.

Native children were raised in an atmosphere of warmth and affection to assume adult roles. Important to learning were such values as sharing, self-reliance, proper conduct, individual responsibility and respect for all living things. Native children had to learn how to make use of the environment to survive. Life, from birth to death, stressed the Native person's link to the sacred and the spiritual.

When Native children were taken from their homes to live in residential schools it was usually far away. Administration procedures were designed to dispossess them and isolate them from their people. One feature of these schools was a lot of physical, sexual, emotional and spiritual abuse. They learned abuse at school.

The effects of abuse were widespread. One hundred and twenty five years of oppression lead to a cycle of poverty and a state of mind almost impossible to break. Only recently is this being talked about. Young Native people see residential schools more as prisons than learning institutions. Abuse becomes ingrained. Now the healing must begin. Native communities are starting to look at how they can heal themselves from within.

Distinguished Archivist Inaugurates Filion Lecture Series

Laurentian University's J.N. Desmarais Library is pleased to announce that Ian E. Wilson, the Archivist of Ontario, will inaugurate Laurentian's new Filion Lecture Series on Friday, February 26, at 2 p.m. in the new Archives Room on the ground floor of the library.

Mr. Wilson's lecture, presented in English, is entitled: "Building a Path to the Past: The Establishment of a Regional Archives at a University." Mr. Wilson, generally conceded to be Canada's finest archivist, was instrumental in the establishment of the Queen's University Archives in the late 1960's, and more recently has served as the Provincial Archivist of Saskatchewan. He has held his current position since 1986.

The topic he is addressing is of particular interest to Sudbury as it celebrates the centenary of its establishment as a town. Hitherto, those interested in following a path back to the area's roots have not had an easy job because of the chaotic state of available records. The J.N. Desmarais Library comes complete with a new, climate-controlled archives which includes special compact shelving. Already, the facility hold valuable university records, labour material, and even papers from Floyd Laughren, MPP. One of the next challenges facing the archives is to develop a policy about what it should collect in the future. In this process, input from the community in the question period to follow Mr. Wilson's lecture is essential.

In addition to his administrative experience, Mr. Wilson has been a popular speaker at school functions and archival, historical and genealogical societies. He has also prepared a series entitled "Heritage Kingston" for CTV. He is a prolific writer who has published on many aspects of archives. Currently, he is preparing a book on the history of Public Archives of Canada and federal culture policy from 1968-1972.

As the first in the Filion Series, Mr. Wilson's talk will honour the founding librarian of Laurentian University, Paul-Émile Filion, s.j. After leaving the university, Filion held various senior posts in Quebec until his death in the fall of 1992.

Adventures Abroad : The U.C.F. Experience

by Rob Stanford
Laurentian U.C.F. student

One morning I woke up and realized that I craved excitement, adventure, and European travel. I needed to escape from the monotonous existence of my cold, snow-bound university. In short, my body and soul yearned to be free. Unfortunately, I was faced with a major dilemma. How could I answer the call of my wandering heart, and still collect valid Canadian university credits? After all, I did want to graduate sometime within the next decade. Then one day I found an answer to all my problems. I discovered a special place called the Université Canadienne en France (U.C.F.).

Nothing could prepare me for the experience of studying in France. The beautiful U.C.F. campus, perched high atop Mont Leuze, offers an unmatched view of shimmering blue Mediterranean, the snowy French Alps, and the sprawling city of Nice. But it is not only the view that is incredible. The dynamic teaching staff and an enthusiastic collections of students from across Canada have come together to make this one of the most close-knit universities abroad.

When you live in a modern, French-styled villa with eight or ten of your fellow Canadians, you learn a lot about life in the different provinces of Canada. The one thing that we all share, however, is our enthusiasm for travel, education and living life to its fullest.

The classes here are just as challenging as they are back home, but here in France we have the opportunity to augment our courses with fantastic field trips. Last term, for example, our political science class spent an evening discussing politics with the Canadian ambassador and his staff in Geneva, Switzerland. This week, we are going to have a renaissance history lesson in Florence, Italy. And how many students in art history courses can say that they have studied famous paintings, on a first hand basis, in some of Europe's finest museums?

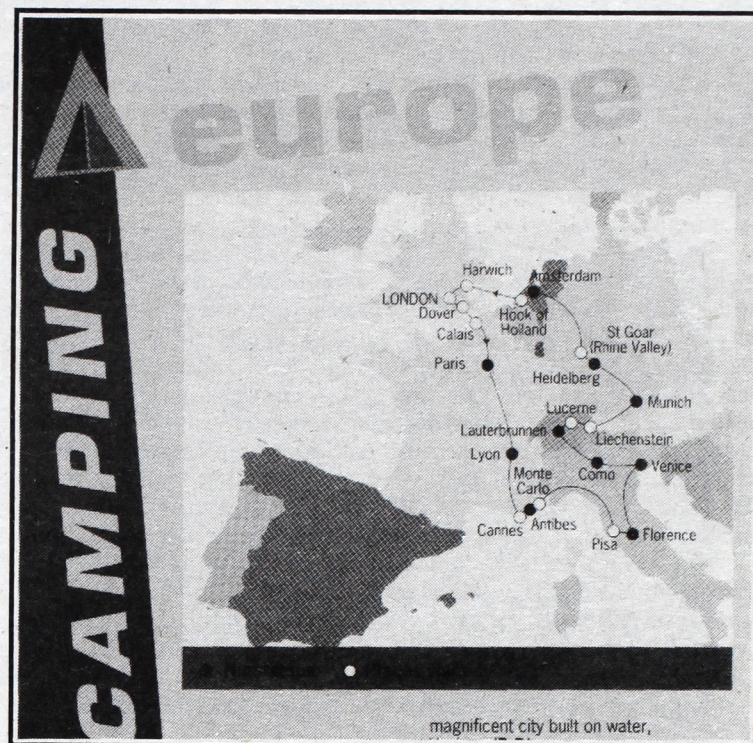

We have plenty of time to travel on the weekends, and with careful budgeting it is easy and affordable to explore the countryside. France and Europe is literally at our fingertip!

At first, I was hesitant to travel, especially since I only had a minimal knowledge of the French language. However, with intensive French lessons each day, and regular trips to Nice, I've found that my comprehension and speaking skills have greatly improved and I can make myself understood any place I visit. Consequently, I travel every chance I get.

I have danced "sur le pont d'Avignon", and eaten wine and cheese at midnight on the front steps of the awesome Palace of the Popes. I have hiked through the spectacular Verdon Canyon—the French equivalent of the Grand Canyon—to see the gorgeous autumn leaves change colour. I've been chased by bulls in Aigue Mortes and ridden horses through the beautiful marshes of Ste. Maries-de-la-Mer. I spent New Years Eve on the Champs Elysee in Paris, and I've been lost in the maze like streets of Venice.

Although I have only been here five months, I've managed to fill each moment with unforgettable experiences and adventures. I have forged friendships that will undoubtedly last a lifetime, and my eyes have been opened to a greater understanding of French and European culture, history and politics.

The Université Canadienne en France has offered me the unique opportunity to achieve my academic goals, and at the same time quench my thirst for travel. This school has played an integral part in my post-secondary education, and it is an experience that I will never forget.

Space University Gets A Home in France

by Edward Prutschi and the exalibur staff
CUP

After a year of deliberations, the International Space University has finally landed—in Strasbourg, France.

The Massachusetts based school announced in Washington on February 1 that its new central campus will be built in France and not at York University as many students and faculty had hoped.

The York-based Institute for Space and Terrestrial Science placed a bid in 1991 to compete with Strasbourg, and Kitakyushu, Japan to bring the space university to York's Downsview campus and the University of Toronto.

York president, Susan Mann, said she didn't know why the space school chose Strasbourg, especially since York was said to be the front runner.

"All the rumors that we had heard were that the Ontario bid was a really good one, well-financed and everything, and that it would likely go ahead. So it was a bit of a surprise," she said.

In Washington, bid proposal manager, Peter Mueller said the loss was a tremendous disappointment to York, Ontario and Canada.

Despite York's loss to Strasbourg for the ISU Central Campus, both York and Kitakyushu will have the opportunity to become the homes of smaller affiliate campuses on their grounds.

The affiliate campuses will be significantly smaller than the central campus in France and will focus on particular aspects of space study.

Opponents of the ISU feared the space school's reputed links to the American military and its proposed $25,000 tuition. Many were also upset that the provincial and federal governments promised millions of dollars for the school's construction and operating expenses.

The first is to let you know, well in advance, that all full-time students who intend to return to Laurentian next September will be required to Advance Register during the period mid-July to mid-August.

Secondly, in order to ensure that your Advance Registration goes as smoothly as possible, we have designated the period March 23 to April 2 for Advance Registration Counselling.

You should make an appointment now to meet with your Academic Advisor during the counselling period. Your Advisor will assist you in selecting courses for next year, resolving problems you might have in meeting degree requirements, and suggesting options which are open to you.

This is not a formal commitment to register for next year, but a counselling session. It is in your best interests to take advantage of this opportunity -- don't miss it!

Good luck with your studies.

The Ball is in Men's Courts

By Michael Kaufman

When I was in Grade Six, and we were all trying to figure out the basics of sex, a friend explained the difference between "fucking" and "raping." In the latter, he said, you tie the girl to a tree. I laughed at the time, as if it were all a joke.

A year or two later, when all the guys were preoccupied with getting to "first base" — that is, a serious kiss — another friend told me about erogenous zones. The back of a girl's neck, for example, was like and Aladdin's lamp to conjure up a girl's desire. If rubbed enough, the girl would melt under your fingers. I wore out many a neck in the months that followed.

The two stories shock me now: one is simply hideous while the other is simply silly. Both stories, though, have much in common. These tidbits of advice share the assumption that sex was something boys, or men, got. We might get it by force or we might get it by smooth moves, but in the end, the issue was our pleasure and our desire.

The one thing that was incomprehensible to me in Grade Six was that males could force themselves on females by something less than bondage to a tree. After all, the girls we knew at the time were not only taller than us, they certainly were not going to be pushed around. Little did I know that within a few years a certain male prerogative would begin to assert itself. We would have power, power to get what we wanted by persuasion ("I love you more than life itself" or perhaps the more pedestrian "aw come on, it'll be fun"), hard luck stories ("I'll die of blue balls if we don't"), manipulation ("what the hell, let's just have one more drink"), or for some guys, if all else failed, sheer physical force.

Such things poison relationships between women and men. Even if you're the gentlest guy in the world, the women you're interested in probably has some experiences of coercion, manipulation, sexist put-downs, or assault. What's happened to her will affect any relationship she enters into.

What's more, sex becomes a game, a contest of wills. Rather than communicating our feelings and desires, and knowing we'll be respected for what we want or don't want, both men and women circle around, hint, and try to guess what the other person is thinking.

The greatest harm of all is done to women. Study after study in the United States and Canada suggest that between 20 and 30 percent of university-aged women are survivors of sexual assault. Many others feel the potential of assault and join the fifty percent of Canadian women who are fearful to walk to the corner store at night (although an even greater danger is from someone they know.)

Perhaps what is most surprising about all this is that it hurts men too. Men who harass or coerce or rape don't do so because men are naturally bad or predatory beasts. It's because of the ways that we've learned to be men. We've learned that to be real men means to assert our power and control, although not usually through physical force. It also means shutting down our capacity to feel what others feel, an indispensable quality if you're interested in meeting your own needs without regard for others.

And let's not waste energy debating statistics. (Whether it's ten percent or thirty percent of women who have been sexually assaulted, we've got a terrible problem on our hands.) Let's not waste energy countering that women are not always angels. (Of course they're not, but men are not regularly beaten or raped by women.) Let's not waste time with needless charges about "male bashers" or "they're saying we're all guilty until we prove ourselves innocent." (no one says all men are rapists or batterers.)

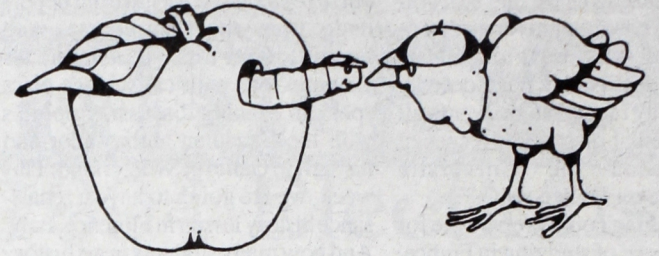

The ball is in men's courts. We can protest and counter-charge 'til we're blue in the face, but that won't make the problem go away.

Better that we rise to the occasion and listen carefully to the voice of women, voices that have been buried for far too long. Better we urge our student councils and administrations to adopt clear codes of conduct about sexual harassment and dating behavior. Better that we encourage educational programs on our campuses. Better that we look at ways that our own attitudes and behavior might contribute to the problem, whether we know it or not. And better that we learn to challenge the men around us to change and to do it now.

Michael Kaufman is National Director of the White Ribbon Campaign. His next book, Cracking the Armour: Power, Pain and the Lives of Men will be published in March by Viking Canada.

Different sexes, different perspectives. Maybe we are not so different after all.

Chivalry is Unisexual

by Andy McKillican
staff writer

A couple months ago, I was about to pass through a door in the Classroom Building when I decided to stop and hold the door open for a gentleman walking behind me.

This is a courtesy I often offer to an individual or group of people that happen to be walking closely behind me. This particular gentleman took the opportunity to walk through the doorway. However, as we continued down the hallway I could see he was amused that a lady held the door for him. I could think of no other way to explain it than to say, "I guess chivalry is unisexual." The young man's eyebrow raised as he considered this statement and he smiled and replied, "I think I like that line."

Unfortunately, a lot of men, in fact the vast majority that I have held the door for, have not been so gracious as to accept my small act of courtesy. In fact, many men feel it necessary to drop behind me and hold the door after I have gone out of my way to let them pass. When this happens, the situation usually ends up in a confusing entanglement of bodies, especially if the access is widely used. This is not to say that I am averse to the meshing of hot sweaty bodies in the Pub on a Thursday night. It does however, pose a problem in the middle of my busy day. It would be far more convenient and polite if men would blaze on through and offer a quick "Thank You".

It occurred to me that this problem arises because such acts of chivalry have, in the past, been reserved for men. This is unfortunate because things like holding a door or pulling out a chair are polite formalities that show the grace of the person offering them and give the object of the courtesy a warm feeling. Why should such social graces be restricted to the male domain?

The fault for confusion does not necessarily lie entirely with men. There is a debate surrounding the issue of chivalry. How many men have been chastised by their female counterparts because they offered some small act of chivalry? Too many women assume that these gestures mean that men see them as vulnerable creatures that need to be coddled.

On the contrary, these actions may be a demonstration of respect. The question is not what are the motivations of these men, but rather are women offering their fair share of polite gestures to make men's lives more pleasant?

This is an issue that will have to be addressed in the near future because of the new reality of women, not only in the workplace, but in the professions.

With a professional position comes the responsibility of showing grace to colleagues and, perhaps more importantly, to customers or clients of their firm.

I cannot say that I have done a lot of research in the area of etiquette; perhaps experts in the field would disagree with some of the views I have expressed. Unfortunately, I do not know any guidelines that delineate the responsibilities of men and women in matters of etiquette. However, it stands to reason that if common sense is used, women will show courtesies if and when the opportunity presents itself. This would create a world that is far less confusing and certainly more pleasant. Men, as well, have a responsibility to more graciously accept a woman's polite gesture, such as holding the door, even if they find them amusing. After all, men might just enjoy the attention.

Please note that nominations for the 1993-94 E.L.S. executive positions will be open from Monday, March 1, to Friday, March 12. Nomination forms are available in the English Department office.

Presidential Candidates

Simon Chapelle

I am the current V.P. External of the SGA and am running for the position of President.

My campaign promises, as laid out in last year's election issue of Lambda have been fulfilled. In addition, many other tasks were tackled with success. i.e. the early release of exam schedules.

This year's platform includes the following:

- extended lunch hours in the pub.
- petition Sudbury Transit for better service.
- pressure administration and provincial government for additional, affordable student housing.
- resolve the bureaucratic morass delaying the recycling program.
- get the SGA senators more involved.
- develop an "Anti-Calendar" with the AEF.

I would like to point out that all of my promises are attainable and will be accomplished.

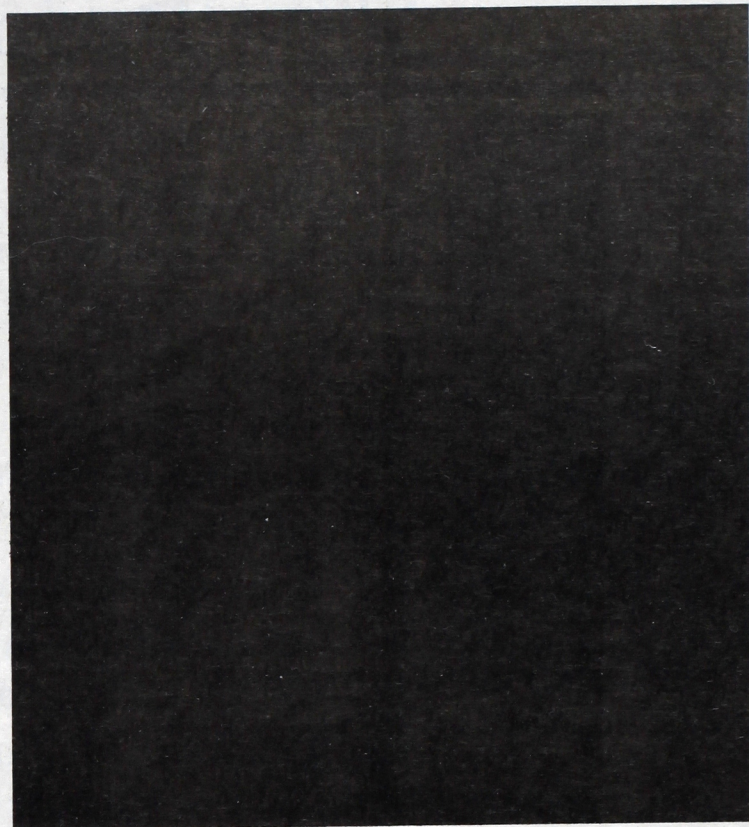

Once again, Vote Simon.

Well you know my name is Simon

And the things I say come true

So go out and vote election day

And cast a vote pour moi!

SGA Election

Vice President - Finance

Hey gang! Sorry about the picture but I'm having a bad hair day. For those of you who don't know me I'm a fourth year commerce student and will be graduating this semester. I served on the SGA this year as Vice-President of Services and would like the opportunity to serve the student body again as Vice-President of Finance.

Terry Thurlow

We have some excellent candidates this year and I would like your support in becoming part of that team. Laurentian is a growing young university and the SGA is here to ensure that the needs of the students are addressed at all levels. Once again, thanks to those who voted for me last year and I hope that I can count on your support again this year.

Good Luck With Exams,
Terry Thurlow

Marlene Sammon

I am a candidate for the position of Vice-President of Finance. For those who do not know me, I am in third year commerce where I will specialize in tax, audit and accounting. I have been the Business Manager of Lambda Publications for the past two years.

During these two years I have increased revenues by 175%, increased cash flows, I have achieved a good standing among accountants in Sudbury and established reliable business contacts. On the technical side, I have established an organized book keeping system, organized and established internal methods of control, developed a computerized system to facilitate the book keeping and I am presently in the process of incorporating Lambda Publications as a not-for-profit organization.

I have developed a system of operations and divisions of responsibilities. At the same time, I have managed all the payroll, national and local advertising, accounting, promotion of financial policies, budgets, capital acquisitions, telecommunications and telemarketing.

The SGA must make a continuous effort to serve the students by supplying the maximum benefits from our fixed and often limited resources. My knowledge and experience have given me the tools by which to meet this challenge.

Supplement

Vice President - External

Heather Bishop

Hi. My name is Heather Bishop and I am campaigning for the position of Vice President External. It is my goal to make Laurentian a warmer place to be, in spirit anyway! The SGA has always stood out as a strong voice for the students based primarily on their concerns and I wish to continue the tradition.

In addition to continuing the many programs implemented this year by Simon, I have a few new ideas. This past year has shown a decreasing interest in Super Pub attendance. I would like to introduce a series of guest lectures on various topics of interest in the place of some of those failing events. With the creation of a new northern university, Nipissing, formerly an affiliate, I would like to initiate involvement with them. This could come in the form of an extended Carney week or an annual competition of some sort. Being in the north doesn't have to be so cold and isolated anymore. I would like to be a strong voice and represent you on the various issues of concern I have heard regarding more realistic library hours and better lighting on campus. Finally it is within my job description to make you aware of the various services the SGA provides for you, for example, the Student Saver, Travel Cuts and the Swap program.

If elected, I assure you that I will use my strong will and dedication to investigate any and all concerns of you, the students, in regards to administration, student assistance, student banks and the local governments.

I believe that by drawing on not only my past experience but also the vast resources of the OFS and CFS that I can effectively represent you in the best possible manner. Come in out of the cold.

Thank you for your support

Heather Bishop

Ian Munro

Good Day/ Bonjour!

Je m'appelle Ian Munroe et je devenir votre V.P. Affaires Externes. I am currently in my third year of a political science degree and have no problems with dropping down to part-time status to serve the students of Laurentian better. I have some ideas that I would like to see implemented at this University, most of which go to better serve the entire Laurentian Community:

- establish monthly meetings with the local members of both federal and provincial parliament to make the concerns to Laurentian students known to them.
- ensure that more and more new Canadian bands make their way to play at the university.

- ensure that the SGA/AGE is up to date on the concerns of the students. This can be accomplished through the use of "fire side chats" in the Student Centre.

- attend the CFS/OFS conferences with the intent of voicing Laurentian students concerns and making sure that both organizations aid the Laurentian community in every way that they can.

- work in co-operation with the other executive members to make the university a more intricate part of the Sudbury community.

Remember to vote on March 3rd & 4th, and vote Ian Munroe for V.P. External.

Vice President - Services

Dino Bozzo

Greetings fellow Laurentian students!

The winds of change have swept across the world bringing about positive new and dynamic changes.

Although it appears to me and many other students, that these changes have not yet reached our stuffy, boring, conservative, "old boys network" better known to us Laurentian Students as our "Student's General Association". The same old, ineffective, monotonous format and performance is the order of the day for our SGA.

The SGA needs to be swept away in these winds of change. I am your candidate of choice to open those heavy dusty doors of the SGA and allow the wind to refresh the air. My insight, vision, and dynamic nature will be the catalyst for a new breed of SGA; tuned into the frequency of the times and the students best interests; keeping the SGA on the cutting edge.

So, if you want to bring about these new and dynamic changes to the SGA, then you will vote Dino Bozzo for your V.P. Services.

Tanya Moore

The latest news! For all you well rested Spring Breakers??

I (Tanya Moore) am running in this years SGA elections for the position of Vice President Services.

Currently I'm in 3rd year Political Science and Economics. I feel my experience in the past year as SGA Senator has given me the competence to deal with the fundamental issues involved with the SGA, specifically the position of V.P. Services.

Experience:

SGA/AGE Services Committee

SGA/AGE Carney Committee (advertising coordinator)

SGA/AGE Finance Committee

Executive Political Science Association

Executive Economics Association

Student Representative Academic Planning Committee

Student Representative Curriculum Planning Committee

It is not necessarily my prior accomplishments that is important, but rather what I am capable of doing for you next year!

So remember, on March 3rd and 4th I would very much appreciate your support.

TAKE CHARGE OF YOUR FUTURE AND VOTE MOORE FOR MORE!

Thanks

Tanya

Saviez-vous qu'il y avait un poste de radio nommé CFLR, ici à l'université? Peut-être! Mais, saviez-vous qu'il y avait des programmes français? Non, ce n'est pas surprenant!

Au début, en 1984, CFLR (Cable FM) jouait de la musique sur la rue des étudiants. On y entendait du reggae, du jazz, du "new wave" et du rock. La musique française ne commença qu'en 1986. La programmation française était d'une durée de 2 heures avec un animateur français, sauf que le programme comprenait de la musique française et anglaise. Le sommet fut atteint en 1991 lorsque CFLR avait 4 programmes français qui duraient 8 heures par semaine. Les programmes étaient très variés: santé, nutrition, culture française, musique. Et pendant la hausse de programmes français entre 1986 et 1991, CFLR décida, en 1990, de faire une proposition à l'A.E.F. CFLR avait déjà fait demande à l'A.G.E. pour du support en 1984. Alors, CFLR alla voir l'A.E.F. pour leur demander s'il voulait avoir un poste sur le conseil des Gouverneurs. L'A.E.F. refusa l'offre sans donner de raison spécifique. Mais, l'association leur a donné $250.

Présentement, CFLR n'a qu'un programme français qui est d'une durée d'une heure par semaine le mercredi à 10 heures. Les animateurs sont Laurent Fleck et Denis Houde.

Carl Jorgensen et Glenn Turner, les chefs de CFLR, veulent des volontaires pour de nouveaux programmes français sur ces thèmes: un magazine français (sujets variés), de la musique française et de la musique canadienne française traditionnelle. Ceux qui sont intéressés, veuillez aller au centre-étudiant à la salle SCE-306.

L'intérêt pour la programmation française doit croître par le mois prochain. La raison pour cela est que CFLR ont fait demande pour un permis FM et ils doivent donner un aperçu de leur programmation. S'il n'y a pas d'intérêt pour la musique française, ils mettront le minimum de programmation en français sur leur demande. Donc, si vous voulez des programmes français dans les années à venir, grouillez-vous le cul!

Le perves Le septième ciel? Oui c'est quoi exactement d'être au septième ciel? J'ai découvert qu'il y a plusieurs explications. Naturellement la plus commune est: c'est lorsqu'on se sent tellement content ou satisfait qu'on se trouve au septième ciel. En autre mot le paradis se situe au septième ciel. Une autre explication est: on est au septième ciel quand on n'est pas au septième ciel.

Ma version est la suivante: (ça ne veut pas dire que c'est vrai, signifie pas non plus que c'est faux). Je pense que le terme ciel a été inventé au temps où le premier avion a vu le jour. C'est logique, sans avion on arriverait pas si haut à que l'on possède ses propres moyens, mais ma grand-m'a toujours dit que la collaboration est le mot clé de réussite. Donc vous êtes bien obligé de le croire. Mais la version des avions n'avait pas réglé tout le problème.

L'immortalité, ça vous dit ?

Thierry Tremblay

Que feriez-vous si demain, pour quelques milliers de dollars, on vous offrait un elixir vous permettant de devenir immortel? Probablement que de prime abord vous n'y croiriez pas et que vous refuseriez mais la curiosité et la tentation vous assailliraient par la suite. Et si ça fonctionnait vraiment? Imaginez, être éternellement jeune et immortel serait le pied? Bien difficile question que celle là...

Il y a au moins deux types principaux d'immortalité: l'immortalité partielle et l'immortalité où il n'y a plus de vieillissement mais où il est possible de mourir accidentellement. L'immortalité totale est celle où il est impossible de mourir et où en cas d'accident il y a régénération des tissus endommagés. À ces deux types d'immortalité s'ajoutent deux variantes: l'arrêt du vieillissement à votre âge actuel, la rajeunissement jusqu'à l'âge désiré. Dans quelques années peut-être sera-t-il possible d'aller chercher votre prescription anti-vieillessement à la pharmacie du coin.

Examinons brièvement les conséquences de l'immortalité totale sur la société. Tout d'abord, que se passerait-il si nous serions tous immortels. Une première constatation est que nous ne devrions plus nous reproduire afin d'éviter une surpopulation. Biologiquement, cela entraînerait une diminution de la diversité génétique et un arrêt de l'évolution de l'espèce humaine. Cependant, il y aurait certes une extraordinaire évolution mentale individuelle. Imaginez ce que l'humanité pourrait réaliser si elle pourrait étudier pendant 100, 200 ans ... Les capacités et connaissances d'un individu s'en verraient multiplier inimaginablement. Un autre constat est que les humains deviendraient plus responsables car ils auraient à subir éternellement les conséquences de leurs actes. Ils planifieraient donc à long terme plutôt qu'à court terme comme nous les faisons aujourd'hui. Malheureusement, les êtres jugés indésirables et nuisibles à la société vivraient eux aussi éternellement... Cela nous amène à l'interrogation suivante: si tous ne devraient pas être immortels, qui devrait l'être et qui ne devrait pas l'être? Je n'aurai certes pas la prétention de répondre à cette question mais examinons ce que serait la vie si seulement quelques individus seraient immortels.

La première chose qui vient à l'esprit est qu'un immortel, étant éternellement jeune, pourrait conquérir le cœur des jeunes représentants du sexe opposé pendant des centaines d'années. Il lui serait cependant difficile d'avoir une relation affective à long terme, à moins de fréquenter un autre immortel, car il devrait changer de partenaire à tous les 5 ou 10 ans. De plus, l'individu aurait peut-être un désir ou une pression d'accomplir des projets beaucoup moindre que le mortel. On dit de ne par remettre à demain ce que l'on peut faire aujourd'hui mais un immortel pourrait tout remettre à cinquante ou cent ans. Libre à vous d'imaginer ce que serait votre vie en tant qu'immortel.

Bref, la vie d'un immortel ou d'une société immortelle serait complètement différente de la nôtre. Tout serait remis en question, peut-être cela serait-il pour le mieux ou pour le pire individuellement, mais une chose est certaine, une société immortelle pourrait difficilement être pire que celle d'aujourd'hui.

Parfois dire ce qu'on pense ou même dire quelque ce soit, peut être très dangereux! Il arrive que l'on dise des choses que l'on aurait jamais dû dire. "L'ignorance est le paradis", dit-on.

J'ai rencontré un nouvel ami, par l'intermédiaire de ma copine. Et nous avons vécu plusieurs expériences ensemble. Ce nouvel ami, depuis tout récemment c'est ouvert. Il a confiance en nous! C'est mon impression.

Mais comme d'habitude, j'ai dit ce qui ne fallait pas dire. Et, grâce à mon indiscretion, mes amis se querellent. De plus, ils m'en veulent.

Je crois avoir perdu la confiance de mon ami. Et ma copine s'éloigne de plus en plus de moi. Alors, j'ai pris une décision! C'est bien simple; je ne me mêle plus des affaires des autres! De cette façon là, il y aura moins de maux de tête pour tout le monde.

Student Services?? What Student Services??

by Prisoner of Reality

Welcome back to the harsh reality of school, kids. Did you have a pleasant Reading/Study week? To all students who went away, it's good to have you back. To those who stayed behind, I have one question to ask: did anyone notice the appalling lack of services open to students during the week? I'm talking about the Greasy Spoon (Hitching Post), the grocery store, and the Games Room.

The Greasy Spoon closed Friday the 12th. Now, I'm not the saying the food there is great, but once in a while, one does get incredible cravings for grease-fish and fries. The 'Spoon was closed. No explanation.

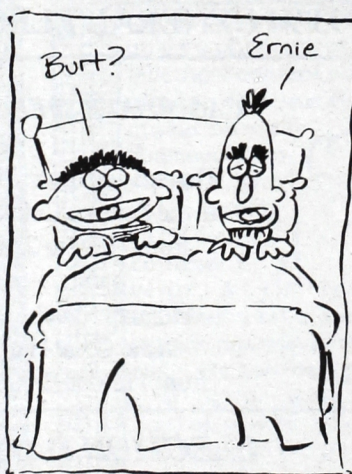

The grocery store also closed that Friday. When I asked the woman who runs it why she was closing for the week, she replied, 'My boss doesn't feel there's a need for us to be open.' Again, ladies and gentlemen, the Almighty Dollar rules the campus. If it ain't goin' to make money, shut it down!! Funny, I thought the grocery store was a service provided for the students. I thought the week was called Reading Week. Some students stayed around and took advantage of the time to get caught up with assignments. It was a big pain in the ass to have to go downtown (or not) just to pick up necessities. Maybe, Marriot should be reminded that our student fees are paying their salaries and maybe we would like a better value for our buck. Can't wait till everything shut down for the summer!! What great fun that will be? And to the people (actually, just one) who work at the 'Spoon who are always in a foul mood, don't be a bitch to the students and then get angry because some student is retaliating to your mood. If you want us to be happy and polite, just give a little of the same. Otherwise, expect to be told to fuck off.

The Games Room in SSR... What can I say? Where do I start? Let's begin with the inconsistent hours. I was hanging out with a friend who told me about the 'Room's stupid hours. Seems he attempted to return a movie at 1 p.m. on his way to class. Surprise, Surprise, the doors were locked, and all was quiet. There is no slot to drop the movies off in, so my friend went to class with the movie. The next day, when the 'Room was opened, he returned the movie but was told he had to pay a late fee. I will not repeat exactly what he said to the fool behind the counter but it certainly was not 'Sure, I'll pay the late fee.' Also in keeping with the inconsistent hours, many a night, I have gone downstairs looking forward to playing a friendly game of pool only to find the doors locked...at 10 p.m. What the hell is going on? The doors are locked, but you can hear people inside the 'Room playing pool, laughing, having a great ol' time. Is the Games Room Manager having private parties on the premises and denying students access to said premises? Or is the staff taking it upon themselves to close up early and get in a couple of hours of private pool time? Are people getting paid for this? Maybe, just maybe I'm just hallucinating, a few times over the past few months.

So the problems we have just covered will not be solved. Will we hear anything about this? No, but someone will probably come up here to the Lambda office looking for me. How dare I bring this to the students' attention? Now, they'll start asking questions and causing trouble. Oh, No... I have upset the delicate balance of things. Guys, if you're not happy with the way things are being run, tell the people in those departments/areas and then, if there is inadequate response, come tell me. I'll be more than happy to bitch about it. More people should. Get involved.

DEEP THOUGHTS. BY GEN NATAI

If I had a million dollars, I would use half of it to hire a hit man to kill student governments. Then I could write on their epitaphs, "Here lies a fascist power monger whose birth was the result of an incestuous rape." I would use the other 2/3 to buy my own McDonalds with a slide.

POETRY BLITZ Hell Hath No Fury.

by: Trek

You say you want to leave me
To find yourself, to grow,
Find Freedom, with my blessing
I'll be sorry when you go.

I'll be sorry when a drive-by shooting
Gets you by mistake
So sorry when cement boots
Weigh too heavy in the lake

It's a shame your broken body will be found beneath a truck.
Oh, you lost a hand in Turkey?
Well, of all the rotten luck.

With genuine regret I'll see your Anguish as you bleed.
I'd hate to be your eyeballs when
Those maggots start to feed!

Be careful with those carbtorators
they're not meant for your arm.
Cheer up - full body casts exude
A certain unique charm.

I really hope your car does not explode in Burning flame.
Struck by lightening? Break both legs?
Oh, that would be a shame.

Mistaken for a sex offender?
Tossed into a cell?
Hung roughly on a meat hook?
Yes, only time will tell.

Yes soon you'll see what life can bring.
Outside my warm embrace,
it can bring a battered body.
It can bring a mangled face

Yes, all these sweet surprises can be yours now that your're free.
Oh, your're sorry? What a pity!
You should have stuck with me.

Have a Nice Life.

MOVIE REVIEW Sommersby

Starring: Richard Gere, Jodie Foster, Bill Pullman

by Diane Sidik
Staff Writer

A remake of the European film The Return of Martin Guerre, Sommersby is a well-packaged production of intense romance and fiery emotion.

Heading the cast off as the long-lost Jack Sommersby, Richard Gere gives an awe-inspiring performance, perhaps his best since An Officer and a Gentleman. His character is both gentle and firm, a hero amongst the townsfolk. This certain air of noblesse causes his co-star Jodie Foster (Mrs. Sommersby) to question his identity. Is this the same Jack she married? After a six year absence, a person couldn't change so much as to suddenly actually love their spouse, could they?

Finally achieving the golden age of thirty-something, Foster exclaims in a Tribute interview that she is comfortable now at this stage in her life. Moving towards the directing aspect of the movie business, Foster's on-screen presence will not be as frequent.

Though Sommersby was an excellent romantic adventure, the film at times lost its direction. It skipped too often from conflict between Foster (Mrs. Sommersby) and Gere (Jack), and Gere's struggle with his tobacco harvesting business. Will it be tobacco, or his wife? Such a tough decision...

At any rate, bring yourself a box of Kleenex when heading out to see this movie, and don't go alone - you'll need a shoulder to cry on.

The Final Blasphemy

by Bates

It was gloomy and shaded, his eyes were stuck closed at first. He stood up, not knowing where he was, slid down the long, slim tube of piping to the platform. Through the fog he could see a green light glowing and he could hear bells ringing softly in the background, a song he knew from childhood.

His legs ached from the dampness, a trait that he had inherited from his mother. Then, it fell on him again.

The mist steamed off of his body while he sat there massaging his pounding temples. The thump-bump of his head resounded in his ears mixing with the church bells still sounding in the distance.

Twice over he had tried to stand and twice his legs had given out dropping him to his knees on the platform. Trying for a third would prove to be fruitless, but nevertheless, he tried, hanging on to the overhanging shackles and chains.

A white supernova of pain shot up through his legs to his head seeming to almost blow out most of his brain. His cry echoed through the fog, rebounding and bounding back and forth around his head. Somehow he had fractured his ankle, the white bones glistening through the punctured skin.

It must have been when it fell on him again that this compound fracture had occurred. Again and again it has fallen; expecting it had become a habit though this was the first real injury to come of it.

Then his heart leapt.

He had heard it.

Yes.

He was here.

He must be silenced.

Broken ankle or not, the blasphemer would be found and punished. A fit end to his crimes.

Footsteps approached. Muffled and haggard, soles dragging behind. Then, through the fog, he appeared, the blasphemer, head down, hands in pockets, hair a tousled mess. He looked up, fear wrenching at his face, widening his eyes. He knew he was finished, he was down. He had tried and failed and now here was the prosecutioner-slash-executioner to hand down a verdict befitting. It was useless running, he had been running all these years, place to place. The prosecutioner-slash-executioner limped forward and with one harsh, quick movement, sent his fist impacting on the blasphemer's face, the blow staggering him, sending him careening over the edge of the platform, falling into an empty darkness.

And for the last time, the blasphemer screamed out his blasphemy, before becoming a dead sack far below:

"He's alive I tell you! Alive! Elvis is aliiiiiiiiiiiiivvvvvveeeee!"

Continuation of the U of T Athletics Program

The University of Toronto Athletics Council has affirmed a new strategic direction for the Department of Athletics and Recreation, while maintaining the traditional breadth of its intercollegiate programs thanks to new partnership arrangements with the University's athletic alumni associations.

The 28-member Council approved a system of 16 High Performance Interuniversity Sports, including Football and women's Ice Hockey, which had been slated for discontinuation in earlier recommendations announced last December. Based on pledges of financial support for the Women's and Men's T-Holders' Associations, 22 intercollegiate teams in 13 sports will be operated on a club basis. There would be a total of 38 Varsity Blues teams, identical to the 1992-93 season.

The Council reaffirmed the recommendations of the Department's Management Team to develop new programs in wellness and campus recreation in accord with the Department's Mission Statement and Strategic Focus.

Dr. McGregor added that the Department's partnerships with alumni ensures the continued breadth of the Varsity Blues intercollegiate program while enabling significant staff and facility resources to be directed to other program areas.

The Council also endorsed a plan for the continued operation of Varsity Stadium for one year at the site of the Varsity football and soccer, plus several other Department and University programs. The Department will undertake to generate additional revenue through increased commercial rentals of Varsity Stadium and the adjoining Varsity Arena.

The gymnastics programs, including the highly successful community club which involves about 800 children, will be continuing pending a review of facility usage and costs. Club programs in boxing, diving and judo will be discontinued. The Department will formally end its intramural tackle football program, but the 99-year-old league is expected to be revived under the auspices of U of T's Erindale College.

The University Affairs Board of the U of T Governing Council will review the Athletics Council's decisions on February 9 and is expected to vote on the athletics Operating Plan and Budget on March 16.

For additional information and to obtain a copy of the complete report, please contact the U of T Sports Information Office, (416) 978-4113.

JACKO ON THE TRAILS: GIV'ER!

Last time we met I quickly explained the classical skiing technique to you. It was a simple explanation as the technique is well known. It is a very esthetically pleasing technique, a pleasure to observe. If you want to go fast, ditch the letter technique and skate. Skating is a more recently developed technique which is ergonomically more effective. To put it simply, one powerfully propels forward by skating on one's skis. The resulting speed can be quite impressive. To give you a more precise idea of what kind of speed we're talking about, let me tell you a short story.

"I was out mountain biking on snowmobile trails one day, and my friend came along, he was skiing using the skating technique. I thought I would push the waif, so I opened up to a speed of 30 km/h. Half an hour later we stopped. Pretty impressive since we stopped because I was the worn out party.

There are different variations to the skating technique, a few examples being offset, one skate, and two skate. These techniques all look like a much more clumsy method of skiing than classical. However, looks can be deceiving, and if you want to go fast, any one of the skating techniques will have you flying in no time.

The team has competed in a couple of races since we last met. Both the men and women have finished well, yet collectively they have their work cut out for them. The Ontario University Championships are going to be held at the end of February and the team members are working very hard to return as victors.

The men's team will definitely benefit from rookie Tim McLees' return. Tim is still under doctor's orders to take it easy. However, Tim assured me that the Mono has cleared up, and the order is just a precaution to avoid a recurrence. Tim has participated in a few races lately using a heart rate monitor to set his pace. Even at the low levels Tim has been exerting himself at, he is skiing at speeds of most of his competitors. Tim promises a full exertion at OUAA's so we have six very fast people who are going to be competing for us.

The women's team is doing very well considering Wendy Davis' absence. She is not competing in the university loop this year as she has qualified for World Championships which are also held at the end of February. The other veterans have worked very hard to make up for this absence. Impressively, team members Dianne Carlson, Patty Murphy, Kim Chefwynd, and Shannon Dunn have all competed spectacularly this year, and have a good chance of repeating as champs. Shannon assures me that the team is working to a zone, and she is personally giving everything she has to make sure the OWIAA banner remains at Laurentian.

Perseverance is one of the most important qualities in a Voyageur. Canada would not be what it is today had it not been for the qualities of strength and perseverance in the Voyageurs. Our own ski team has demonstrated to me that they too possess these same qualities, and because of this, they will make us proud. Win or lose, they promise to compete as true sportsmen; to give up every millimole of Adenosine Triphosphate in their bodies in an effort to win, and to show the competition we command respect. Good luck you Voyageurs and remember, "go hard or go home".

LAURENTIAN SWIMS STRONGLY AT THE OUAA'S

The men's half of the Laurentian Swim Team had their OUAA's in Ottawa this past weekend, finishing seventh in a very strong field. Andrew Galbraith qualified for CIAU's in the 200m breaststroke; bringing Laurentian's total number of CIAU qualifiers to 5, 6 including Campbell Hastings (relay swimmer). This is the most that has ever qualified for CIAU competition at Laurentian.
